We're proud to make the Financial Times Europe's Best Employers List for the second consecutive year

21 May 2026, Geneva, Switzerland – Verisure plc (“Verisure”), the world’s leading provider of professionally monitored security services by customers served, has been recognised once again as one of Europe’s best employers by the Financial Times.

Verisure was also included in the Financial Times’ inaugural selection of Europe’s Best Employers last year, which ranks the top 1,000 companies across 26 industries. Scores are calculated based on an anonymous survey in which employees are asked whether they would recommend their employer to friends and family, and which other companies in their sector they would recommend.

Austin Lally, Verisure CEO, said: “Verisure’s journey to become Global #1 in our industry has been built on our strong foundation of culture and talent. So, we value greatly this Best Employer recognition. For us it's not just a badge. The engagement of our people is strategic and key to our success.”

Verisure is committed to creating supportive, high-performing working environments and continues to be recognised through multiple external awards and certifications. It is officially recognised as an outstanding employer in all its 18 countries, with certifications including Great Place to Work™ and Top Employer®. This is underpinned by highly engaged teams, with a Sustainable Engagement Index above 85 for a fourth consecutive year.

Marta Panzano, Chief Human Resources, Communications, and ESG Officer, said: “We are honoured to feature in the Financial Times’ list of Best European Employers for the second consecutive year. This award, alongside other accolades, reflects our commitment to creating a working environment where every one of our more than 30,000 colleagues can thrive and unleash their full potential.”

These certifications and awards contribute to Verisure’s colleagues’ sense of pride in being part of the company. They also position it strongly to attract the best-in-class external talent needed to support its continued growth in the years ahead.
